Cox announces that it has formalized an agreement with the Ministry of Agriculture of Morocco for the expansion of the Agadir (Morocco) desalination plant, which will increase its capacity from 275,000 m³/day to a total of 400,000 m³/day, distributed as 150,000 m³/day for drinking water and 250,000 m³/day for irrigation.

This expansion will contribute to the water supply in one of the areas most affected by water stress, using efficient and sustainable technology.

The project is part of the Green Morocco Plan and aligns with the objective of rationalizing and diversifying water supply sources for agricultural irrigation, thereby strengthening the country's water system resilience.

Additionally, Cox will complement the desalination plant with a wind farm of over 150 MW, under the 'Energy Follows Water' model, thereby reaffirming the company's integrated and sustainable approach.

The total estimated investment is €250 million between 2025 and 2027.
